The aim of this study was to assess the impact of positron emission tomography (PET) and optical coherence tomography (OCT) imaging for the prediction of survival in newly diagnosed malignant pleural mesothelioma (MPM) patients. The study was designed as a population-based, multicenter, prospective, observational cohort study. The study was conducted from April 2014 to October 2017 in 21 Italian centers. The primary end point was overall survival. The study was finalized in December 2017. A total of 336 patients with histologically confirmed MPM were included. The median overall survival was 22.6 months. In the univariate and multivariate analyses, PET and OCT imaging had significant and independent prognostic value in terms of overall survival. For PET imaging, the median overall survival was 27.3 months in the low-fluorodeoxyglucose (FDG) group and 17.0 months in the high f30f4ceada
