Time Split Tracker Free

Turn your productivity into a game and challenge your friends. Cut down the time it takes to do your everyday tasks, or even the time it takes to complete your very first split. As long as you know how long things take you can do pretty much anything at any time. You can even set TimeSplit Tracker to use a timer to randomly add splits to a timer and see how fast you can complete it. [Publisher's Description] Save time and do more. TimeSplitTracker gives you the power to control how fast you can complete activities and projects. With TimeSplitTracker you can save time by setting a target time that you will try to beat, and if you do beat the time you get points. You can also set a target score that you will try to achieve. Any kind of split you can think of is supported by TimeSplitTracker. The app comes with presets for many of them including writing text, sorting items, folding items, and even putting plastic cups together. Use the timer to track time for each of the splits and compare them to your previous splits and to other players. If you want to track more than one split at a time you can keep track of several split histories and sort them by the amount of time you've saved. TimeSplitTracker can even track your time with other apps. You can select different apps and combine the saved times. What's New in Version 1.0.6: *More bug fixes the time interval into smaller ones and show you a progress graph and individual data. The program has a simple and easy-to-use interface. It lets you select and then start/stop the timer for each activity with an accurate time interval. You can also add a custom name for each activity and view the time split history graph. If you need more information, you can get help by pressing Alt+F1, it will show you more detailed options.

Features: - Create multiple timers to track the duration of different activities - Split the interval into small time units - Define names for each activity - View progress graph and detailed timer data - Send the data to clipboard for backup - Full screen mode

Big difference. This one is the kind of program you would love to have in your daily routine.

Whether you're in office or at home, Daytimer will be your right-hand and best friend. Daytimer is the only schedule manager that won't force you to think about time the way you're used to. Instead of specifying exact hours and minutes, the program's functionality provides you with an efficient, flexible and simple way to plan your day. Designing your schedule couldn't be easier. Just set the time frame and type of activity, and Daytimer will automatically fill the remaining hours with the right amount of breaks. To begin with, you can have a single activity that spans the entire day. Or you can have multiple activities with various durations, working hours, breaks and so on. Just create an event, choose the place where you want to do this activity and place it on a specific day. Once done, you can set the schedule in a way that you prefer. For example, if you want to leave at a specific time, Daytimer will automatically add a break at that time and move the activity to the next day. If you don't want to go any further than 10pm, then you can add a late end time and no time will be filled. And don't forget to add a break for that activity, or you will have to do it manually. You can also set the wake-up time, because Daytimer doesn't require a fixed and rigid schedule. It can be as flexible as you want. If you need to see the schedule before you actually set it, you can check it out in a graphical fashion. Just select an activity from the list, move the days with the arrows and select the suitable hours. The application is full-featured. It lets you add a maximum of 16 activities, set the schedule with multiple time
