I have a list of movies and each movie has an actor name. I am trying to print only those movies whose actors and their corresponding movie names appear within the order of the input list. The input list has two sub lists -- one with a name and the other with an associated title. The title appears before the name. This is what I have tried so far -- for movie in allmovies: for firstname, lastname, title, director, genre in themovielist[0][0:3]: if movie.title != " and movie.title not in themovielist: print('{0} {1} {2} - {3}'.format(title, firstname, lastname, movie.title)) This prints all the movies and their actor names but the order of the list is wrong. It needs to be (title, firstname, lastname, movie.title). How do I do this? A: In Python, lists are not ordered in any specific way. Use the argsort() function to get a list of the movies sorted in order of your desired criteria. from operator import itemgetter movies = ['movie1','movie2','movie3','movie4','movie5','movie6'] print(*sorted(map(itemgetter
