A dud bomb that failed to explode during World War Two is seen in the rubble of a building in Malines, Belgium January 30, 2018. REUTERS/Yves Herman Police said the device was found in a disused cow shed which had been abandoned at the end of last year. The building was linked to a plot to smuggle jihadis to Syria, officials said. "It's a very heavy device, made up of about 400 individual components including nails, nuts and bolts," police spokesman Frank Vercammen said. "These kind of things are rarely found by accident. Someone must have been looking for this," he added. Security in Belgium is tight ahead of local elections on March 21, one year to the day after Islamic State gunmen and bombers killed 32 people at the Paris and Brussels airport and on a metro line. Three people have been arrested in Belgium's biggest ever jihadist investigation. They were charged with terrorism offences in
