polytetrafluoroethylene framework]. To evaluate the endothelialization and tissue compatibility of Valgus-Lima vascular grafts (GAB), Valgus-Lima artificial blood vessels (GABV) with expanded polytetrafluoroethylene (PTFE) framework were implanted into the subrenal capsule of New Zealand white rabbits (n = 9). After fabrication and pretreatment, the expanded PTFE framework of GABV were fixed to the abdominal wall of the rabbit with 3-0 nylon. The patency rate of GABV and GABV with PTFE framework were 100% and 88% at 3 months. The areas of GABV were enlarged as they were implanted into the rabbit. After implanting GABV into the rabbit, a kind of neointimal hyperplasia was found around the PTFE framework of GABV. But there was no such phenomenon found in the other parts of GABV. In clinical applications, extra-anatomical bypass might be more suitable than intra-anatomical bypass in many patients. In this study, it showed that Valgus-Lima artificial blood vessels with PTFE framework is suitable for extra-anatomical bypass. Journey along the ancient routes of the Iberian Peninsula.
