Clients can query or attach to the server programmatically, as well as using command-line utilities. The fexi command is essentially equivalent to the runspool command found in 4.4BSD and earlier. The fexi command allows you to spool data to the printer queue by the following syntax, which is almost identical to the syntax used in the 4.4BSD runspool command: print arg1 arg2... SPOOL arg1 arg2... VARIABLES The variables described by fexi-related man pages are global, and are set for all fexi clients. DBUS_PRINTER_GROUP The name of the "file system group" that manages the printer spool queue for the system. This group contains the binary files for the stored spool data, and the directories for the spool queue. As configured by the passwd(1) and group(1) commands, the name of the group is "fexi-printers". ENVIRONMENT When using BIND(1), the fexi client will read the fd-based names from the named.conf file as the name of the "virtual" printer device on the print queue. COMMAND The fexi command is invoked by a program to set up and tear down a print queue with the server. When invoking the command, the arguments in parentheses must be specified as in
