Discuss this Comment System on Some Questions that keep this game interesting The video of this map is here. Enjoy! Note: it's a gray screen video. Again, this is being done purely because I love roleplaying games of all kinds. If you enjoy my maps, be sure to check out the free RPG resources available at GameMuse. Their main site contains a ton of stuff. "It is the first law of the fist that a man hath rights to himself." - Allan Oldman, Narrator of the Deneb Adventure map "If you do not like the lives of the learned, read the lives of the poets." - Rabindranath Tagore System: The system will be a DnD 3.5 game. The core D&D rules can be found here: The Mistborn covers this area. Players can be either Oathsmen or Mistborn. Oathsmen's are adventurers, who can use magic and combat their way through just about any situation. Each Oathsmen character begins with the Feats they have selected for their Oath, which grant them bonus abilities. In addition, each character gains a domain, which is a special ability. Each domains grants various effects on a failed ability check. Oathsmen are highly trained warriors who learn to be more than just "mere" warriors. However, they are outnumbered by the Mistborn, who are very different. Mistborn begin as Mistborn-born. Mistborn-born are scholars, and each character gains the Scholar (Mistborn) Feats. Mistborn-born begin with no Domain. However, their Domain gets larger as their "Mistborn Character Arc" increases. Domain Abilities are found on pp. 68-69 of the game. Fantasy Grounds "I see a world in ashes, and men, who know neither kindness nor remorse, crouching over the last fires and melting what must not be named, for it is not wholesome that minds should feast on each other's miseries" -Edgar Allan Poe "It is the first law of the fist that a man hath rights to himself." - Allan Oldman, Narrator of the Deneb Adventure map "If you do not like the lives of the learned, read the lives of the
