Cubase, the interval that the current density at the time of application reaches the entire amount of the saturated magnetic flux density by the time of the next writing, these conditions cannot be set. The actual writing speed of the thin film perpendicular magnetic recording medium becomes slower than the predicted speed. The effects of the magnetized state of the base layer on the recording layer are described. The saturated magnetic flux density of the recording layer is set to 100 G or higher at 0 Oe or less. But the saturated magnetic flux density in the remanent magnetization state reaches as low as several to several tens of m G. The magnetic flux density of the remanent magnetization state is defined by the thickness and coercive force of the base layer. Since the thickness of the base layer is typically several ten to several hundred nm, the magnetic flux density in the remanent magnetization state at 0 Oe becomes a few to several m G. When the base layer is a soft magnetic layer or an amorphous magnetic layer, the direction of the magnetization of the base layer will not be completely uniform within the layer thickness of the base layer. As a result, the directivity of the magnetic field emitted from the surface of the recording medium in the remanent magnetization state becomes non-uniform. To solve the non-uniformity of the magnetic field emitted from the thin film perpendicular magnetic recording medium, a method of adjusting the magnetization state of the base layer by a magnetic field generated by a magnetic flux is suggested. The following Japanese Patent Application is pending: JP-A-10-236865 (Japanese Patent Application No. 10-236865/1998) entitled: thin film magnetic medium and medium driving method. According to this invention, the base layer (12), (12') is magnetized to have the saturated magnetic flux density at 0 Oe (Hc) of 0 to 10 Oe by a magnetic field of 2 Oe or more generated from a magnetized layer (14) (the magnetized layer (14) corresponds to the base layer (12

Q: an algebraic condition for points to have integer coordinates is there any characterisation of points (x,y) in \mathbb{Z}^2 where x,y can be considered integers? This is related to my problem: $$ $ \min(x,y,z), \lceil \min(x,y,z)^2 = (x+y+z)(x+y+z-1) \rceil \min(x,y,z) \cdot \min(x,y,z)^2 = x^2 + y^2 + z^2 - e79caf774b$
