English translation: Arrr! What a bother! This game is where I learned so many lessons! I can't exactly remember how the story started. It was over when I was young. In this game I met many, many characters. They played on the same team, but each had their own, unique story. I went on several journeys through the world, and my dearest companions got it. From there I began to lead the greatest of battles of my life. I am sure that you will, too. Of course, you will meet the Devil, and a necromancer from Italy. He's not that bad. I think of him as a "youthful teacher". From there, we arrived at the Lands Between. I was surprised! I've never seen such a beautiful world! There are huge buildings, and many, many, many things! It's so big that I can't even express it. But there was an even bigger surprise. The game's story will be over when you complete it. I can't help but wonder how the story will end. I wonder what will happen to me. I wonder who will you will end up with. I will replay the story a hundred times, I don't care. I never thought I'd be able to meet such a huge amount of characters. The story of these characters is so excellent! This game has touched my heart. What I loved most about the story was the details. I will not stop going on adventures with you! I will play as you, I will fight with you, I will visit with you. I never thought that I'd meet such good people! I am truly grateful. I wanted to meet you and travel with you! At any rate, thank you for reading this story of mine. Thank you for playing with me. THE NEW FANTASY ACTION RPG. Sebastian Manning hits paydirt with Mar del Plata Sebastian Manning (Vbo), the 23-year-old son of Bill Manning, was like a fixture in the SMF membership. Well-focused on the Canterbury batting scene, he made his maiden score with an unbeaten 81 on debut in August's Emirates T20 Blitz. He played 12 games, including the first 4 of the Main Competition, and showed good application and a great mind to detail – especially to read the bowler's flight. Manning took his first fifty, off 39 balls, having scored just 39* in the latter stages, against Waikato's Michael Kyle, who had six wickets, and exactly the same number of noughts against Linwood's Craig Wright's side. Steven Mallinder came in for the run chase, and after he had won the game off all wickets – Nolan Thompson, tucked into the dying overs, was another in his four balls and four noughts – Sebastian Manning, having beaten Mallinder inside out, thrashed him over mid-wicket off the second last ball, off Marsden's well-directed bowling, to claim his maiden fifty. He finished with more than a hundred runs. The rest of

1. Field of the Invention This invention relates generally to a time changeable dimmer circuit for a load, and more particularly to such a circuit where the dimmer value is adjustable. 2. Description of the Prior Art There are basically two different types of dimmers. One type operates by changing the impedance of the load. The other type does not alter the impedance of the load. The invention relates to the dimmer circuit type that does not alter the impedance of the load. Although this type of dimmer circuit does not alter the impedance of the load, it does effect the operating current to the load. It may have either a limited range of adjustment, or a continuously varying range of adjustment. There are dimmers that vary the range of adjustment in discrete steps. For example, dimmers are used in the home or the office, and light bulbs may be dimmed from 100 percent to 20 percent or 10 percent to 0 percent. These dimmers operate by adjusting the duty cycle of the power supplied to the bulb. The duty cycle is the time over a given period during which the supply of power to the load is active. Since the brightness of light bulbs dims continuously with the amount of power supplied, it is often desirable to continuously adjust the amount of power supplied to the load. For example, the light intensity may be decreased during a night time operation, and increased during daytime operation. A typical lamp dimmer has a fixed range of adjustment. That is, the range of adjustment is not adjustable. Also, the dimmer values are not continuously adjustable. For example, the dimmer values may only have steps of 5, 10, 15, 20 and 25 percent, in order to set the light bulb to a predetermined percent of brightness. If the desired percent is set to 25, the dimmer must operate with a range of dimmer values starting at 10 and going to 40. Once the desired dimmer value is achieved, the range of dimmer values to adjust the light bulb brightness are fixed. If the dimmer range of adjustment is continuously adjustable, the user may continuously adjust the dimmer until a desired dimmer setting is achieved. This may be more desirable than a fixed setting. However, in many applications it is not practical to provide a continuously adjustable dimmer. Also, the continuously adjustable dimmer increases the complexity of the dimmer circuit. This complexity must be overcome by providing an easy to use, and inexpensive dimmer that has a continuously variable range of adjustment.WASHINGTON
