New Orleans Not to be trifled with RIGHT: Connie Forsberg, a proud donor to the Pregnancy Center of Greater New Orleans, kneels in front of a small altar outside her home. The 'altar' is actually a suitcase which contains $500 collected from 30 donors like Forsberg, as well as her monetary offering. (Photo by D.J. Fenney/Times-Picayune) More than a year after Hurricane Katrina left her homeless, Connie Forsberg is determined to get out of the way of Mother Nature. At age 59, she has already been through two hurricanes - her family's stormy history in Louisiana, one that ended when a fierce, eight-day-old August wind and rainstorm swept away her home just below the Mason/Jefferson Parish line at Crowley. Unable to rebuild, Forsberg has had her finances and her family resettled by numerous hands. First came the Army Corps of Engineers, who provided temporary housing that cost about $10,000 over 18 months. Then she was given a house, built with her money and her husband's, by the nonprofit Pregnancy Center of Greater New Orleans. And she's been paying her taxes since then, since in the eyes of the IRS, she has no home. "The last thing I want to do is be a burden to someone else," said Forsberg, who takes care of the four-room home as well as its 2 1/2 acres of land. "I just want to live where I live. I don't want to be a burden. I don't want anybody to ask, 'Are you still living there?'" The house at 3328 Roma Ave. is a quiet oasis in a crime-infested neighborhood, and it is an apt home for the retired schoolteacher with short, gray hair and a morning-glory-patterned shirt. The land, however, is a regular part of the New Orleans landscape. Forsberg has been forced by a lack of flood insurance coverage to rely on FEMA and the Pregnancy Center while she rebuilds her home. The center's attorney, Walter Heitmeyer, said Forsberg is considered uninsured because bff6bb2d33
