On Mars, the Colony of Orbital is established to exploit resources found on the planet. Through harsh economic conditions, families that were once united have become split and, considering that the Games Company that got involved in this project is a gaming company rather than a company that provides a service, the survival of Orbital relies on the pockets of the top executives. On these grounds, the entire colony relies on the Orbital Express company, which seems to be the embodiment of success. Within the Orbital Express company, only two things matter: the top executives and the glorious past of the company. Orbital Express is a game where the train itself has a role, and the train is truly the "slot car" of this game. Going through the tunnel, the train begins its continuous long journey towards the goal. According to the simplest explanation, at the first glance this game seems like it's just another racing game. However, as one looks deeper into the game, one notices that the track in this game is way more interesting than any other racing game. The whole layout of the track on this game is formed by the tracks of the satellite colony. As I explained before, the Space Colony is one of the most fascinating places in the whole Solar system. Inside the colony, the main thing that stands out is the Orbital Express, which is the spaceship and its entire crew. The Orbital Express is truly the embodiment of success. It has the most powerful engine among the whole fleet of the Orbital Express. The engine that drives this train is the biggest element of this game, as it is the engine that turns the game into what it is. Because the ore that is used in this game is the ore that is extracted from the tunnels in the orbital colony, the tracks are formed by the tunnels themselves. This causes that when the train goes through the tunnel, the train is being pushed by the wind that's blowing out from the tunnel. This is a really unique feature. According to my experience, there was a certain kind of a "slot car" driving game that met my expectations. Therefore, to be honest, Virtual SlotCars is certainly a game that I truly feel grateful to have played. The charming aspect of the game is the fact that the machine is capable of a real feeling of being more alive than other games that I played in the past. The express of the game is really something, but it is the game itself that is a great experience. The twist that makes this game unique is
