The present invention relates to heat exchangers, and more particularly to a heat exchanger for removing heat from the viscous gas phase in a pipeline. Removing and applying heat to the viscous phase of gases are requirements of many industrial processes, such as in oil and gas production. For example, in treating oil and gas wells or in handling other fluids at high temperatures and high pressures, substantial heat must be removed from the viscous phase. To this end, heat exchangers have been used to remove such heat from the viscous phase of gas. Examples of such heat exchangers are described in U.S. Pat. No. 3,871,285 to Case and U.S. Pat. No. 4,328,908 to Engel. In addition to removing heat from the viscous phase, it is desirable to apply heat to that phase to aid in mixing or other chemical reactions. U.S. Pat. No. 4,492,617 to Breed describes a heat exchanger that applies heat to a phase of fluid by causing a fluid to flow at a velocity such that kinetic
