You can see a glimpse of how this technology looks in action in the video below. FIFA's expert development teams are simultaneously revisiting the game's AI systems to ensure the stability and reliability of long-term gameplay. A hallmark of FIFA's gameplay has always been how fluid and expressive the game flow is. The teams have focused on delivering a more realistic passing and shooting system across match types, including a match simulation and tournament modes. FIFA's game engine has been pushed to the limit when harnessing a new realism in gameplay through an increased use of physics, and a vast array of procedural techniques. In addition to FIFA's "Momentum" system, its artificial intelligence delivers what will prove to be a new level of accuracy and responsiveness when things happen during the flow of a game. Systems and AI The FIFA 22 game engine has been optimized for console and PC via DirectX 12. Exiting the same stable base that has powered the past FIFA game engines, FIFA 22 introduces new VR features. The introduction of the new VR features allows for the creation of short- and long-term game modes. The team behind the development of FIFA for PC and consoles has introduced new game-play options. Using personalised settings, players can adjust the level of physicality and density of their players. Personalised settings include: AI - the AI settings include the number of players on each team and the maximum speed of each player as well as the dampening effect. Physically transferred options - through new physics features, players can create their own personal transfer profile. New physX implementation - FIFA has been improved with a new, powerful rendering engine. Dynamic animated groups - the new FIFA engine allows for the creation of virtual groups of players on the pitch during play, and includes dynamic animation and movement based on the player-controlled VR behavior. New animation workflow - motion capture animation of players is supported through a new animation work flow. The new animation workflow includes the following: Pose-based animation - the pose-based animation allows for the creation of a wide range of dynamic motions such as bowing, throws, head-on, standing, side-to-side, standing, kneeling, and run-out. Character rigs - character rig animation allows for a wide range of dynamic motions through the use of bone rigs and animation sequences. Character
