I am debugging the application with VS 2008, the service is invoked via the web browser from a VS 2008 application. I have a IE 11 browser and a VS 2008 + .Net 4.0 installed on my workstation (those computers are connected to our company's intranet via a VPN). However, after connecting to the service I do not see any messages, errors or anything. The browser just doesn't show up. It doesn't start with: The connection to the web site was interrupted. The website was trying to establish a secure connection using https to request a client certificate to participate in the client authentication. If I turn on IE's developer tools (F12), I get no errors. I can view source, inspect CSS and so on, I can even make post requests to localhost (I get them with the same VS 2008 and VS 2010 side VS) -- but I cannot invoke the service. I have a class library (it includes the .Net 4.0 DLL with the web service) with web references in VS 2010 -- I can add it to a VS 2008+ project and debug it with IE 11 as well. I have also tried with VS 2010 installed. I have two different VS installations on this computer, one without internet access and the other with internet access (it's on the same computer). Doing "start debugging" from the VS 2010 app, it doesn't even start, just frozen. I have set the app pool to use .Net 4.0 under web services on this solution's web.config file. My service has no firewall settings set. Does anybody know why? A: I have no idea why it is working in VS2010+ but not in VS2008. But at least I found a workaround, which is to re-publish the service as .Net 4.0 Q: How to close Java GUI I am creating a simple GUI e79caf774b isomorphism of graded modules, between quotient and original, always an isomorphism of the spaces they map to? In differential geometry, one might have a vector field  $X$  on a manifold  $M$ . The set of "infinitesimal" vector fields  $\mathfrak{X}(M)$  have a Lie algebra structure, and the fact that  $X$  is a  $\mathbb{R}$ -differential operator on  $\mathbb{R}^n$  then gives rise to the equation  $X^2 = \left[ \frac{\partial}{\partial x^i}, \frac{\partial}{\partial x^j} \right]$
