What's new in Greedy Crush:

District, Fujian Shanhe District () is a city district (district) of Zhangzhou, a prefecture-level city in Guangdong province, China, bordering Fujian province to the north. During the Ming dynasty, the city of Zhangzhou was known as Jingde (). It is one of the oldest and most important cities on the middle reaches of the Min River (Slavonic: Yugra), on the trade route from the capital Nanjing to the port of Jiangmen. History Ming dynasty In 1631, in the late Ming dynasty, the city of Zhangzhou went through a disaster. Due to war, enough foodgrain to feed the people was insufficient. When the Northern Ming Empire collapsed, hundreds of thousands of people starved to death. 1683–1684 Silk Road massacre Zhangzhou was sacked by the Qing dynasty in 1683, but was able to regroup and fought back the Qing dynasty during the 1683–1684 Silk Road massacre. Modern era It was part of the Nan'an and Longhu Factories during the Qing dynasty. In 1907, the Eight-Nation Alliance troops led by occupied and set fire to the Longhu Factories. Zhangzhou was subsequently claimed by the government of the Republic of China as one of the cities belonging to the Province of Jiangnan since 1928. In 1953, during the Great Leap Forward, a small-scale nationalization, about 360,000 people were forced to move to rural areas, including about one fifth of the local Han people. In 1959, Zhangzhou got its first high school. In the 1980s, public education was stepped up by the government. In 1985, Zhangzhou won its first gold prize in the Zhongguo Shehui Kexue Bowuguan (Chinese Society for Social Sciences) Essay Campaign over "A Study of the Commercial Sectors in the Qing and Ching Provinces Regarding Trade Goods" (清及清省商贸货物研究). In 1992, the famous Yuehua crater in Yanan County, Zhangzhou was discovered. It became an important tourist attraction. It was regarded as one of the significant local environments among China. In 1999, Zhangzhou was upgraded to a prefecture-level city. Geography Shanhe District is currently the most important city
