The craziest thing about this game is that it actually is a PC version of a Playstation 3 game in Japan.Google has been asked to remove links from its website that could be used by copyright trolls to identify people with small, unpaid debts of copyright infringement. The target of the request is the extremely controversial Canadian music collection agency Music Net, which was co-founded by Paul Gersten, a lawyer and former attorney general of Ontario. The agency runs a system that assigns the owners of the copyrights to songs to debt collectors who file lawsuits seeking to have them settle small music-related debts. People sued for more than $750 in unpaid copyrights can be sued for the entire amount, even if they can afford to settle at lower rates. In his call for the removal of links from Google's web pages, Gersten said he took issue not only with the practice of suing people who don
