A Journey Through Life Menu Loss and Gain is Life The title of my blog is Life One Day at a Time, but only one day at a time, not every one. Now we go back to school in the fall, which means more big changes. I know that I will feel different and a little lost, but there is a peace to this. I will have a new teacher, as well as school itself. Then there will be a new home with my husband who is now my college room mate and best friend. We are new parents to a dog, a cat and a guinea pig. These are all changes in our lives and our family. I will always love my family of three, but I will love them more if we are making changes together. One day at a time, I am preparing for all the changes we will be making together. I love my family and think of them every day. This summer I was able to take a week vacation with my family and some college friends. We swam, went to the beach, caught up with old friends, went fishing, and just relaxed and had a lot of fun. The downside was that I gained a few pounds, but it was the best vacation I had in years. I will go back to school now and we will begin a new routine. It's all good. "So we must embrace the impermanence in life and the beauty that it holds."-Diana Marker I still live day by day, and I must tell you that is better than dwelling on the past. Here is to happy days and good memories for you to look back on. The days of today are too short for all the wasted time you have wasted. Your life is only given to you once. Do not waste time. Time is money, but if you have money you have time. Live every day, love every minute. Be thankful for the time that you have been given on this earth. Work hard, but live well. Laugh often, for laughter is the best medicine. Open your heart and your mind and live in the here and now. Love the people you have in your life, and do not forsake them. Things of the past may be bad and painful, but maybe they can help to build your future. I am always on the lookout for life lessons. This summer was the first time I felt what it was like to be away from my family and

Out of the blue, a meeting is arranged. We are encouraged to enjoy a lot of downtime together, which is no problem. It is part of the nudist experience. We take it in turns to stay outside, visiting our friends. We learn that they are from France, but that their family has been in Italy for generations. We learn that their father is a sculptor and is best friends with someone who is a painter. We enjoy this ballet of naturists, surfer-bods, New Yorkers and people from Minnesota. It's a good group of friends. It's a Saturday night, so some of the Brits decide to join in the social fun. Their ages are matched to ours, so it is all good. I go to join them – one of the greatest pleasures of the game. The Frenchies are getting the eighties on. Before we know it, their brakes have decided to fail on a sharp roundabout. All of a sudden, we are at the foot of the sharp, sweeping curve. The group comes screaming around the bend. The Brits and I are in the vanguard, trying to look cool. There is plenty of room on our side, so I don't worry about jostling. But there is no room on the inside, where the four Frenchies are close to the corner. The reason is simple. The Frenchies are so big that they block the other bods from getting out of the car. The driver is a little shocked and we are all shocked. They all pile out of the car, and begin to take off their clothes. In their frenzy, the whole group runs towards a big, flat rock. It is an emergency plan. The Frenchies say they have to leap over this rock to get to the safety of their friends. My God. I watch as they finish stripping off – their pants, T-shirt and sports bras. They plop down on the rock – three bods on one rock. They stare at the naked rock scene and then at each other. They have all been nude in this place before, so no big deal. They had their clothes on at the time. I am the only one there who is not a nudist. I am mortified. It's embarrassing. No one would ever know. For a second, I am tempted. But the Brits are watching
