Lumion 9.5.0.1 Crack With Keygen Free Download 2019 Lumion 9 Crack With Keygen is a software which easily turn your photos, videos, music, text into fun video slideshows..Q: Conditionally ordering by two columns in Spark with Scala I have a dataframe in spark and would like to order the columns on whether one of them is above/below a specific value (for example, the median). I thought it would be something like df = df.orderBy(df.col("col1") > 4, df.col("col2") > 4) But when I do this, I get the error: Error:(40, 42) not found: value > which isn't surprising, since I haven't specified a column. Is there any way to conditionally order by columns in Spark (or Scala) dataframes? A: when reading up on this I came across a post (link) suggesting something along the lines of (df.col("col1") + df.col("col2")) / 2 > 0.5 this allows for a column to be greater than half the difference between that column and the median. This did the trick for me. If you have a better answer, please let me know!
