What's new in Fantasy Grounds - Pulp Gear Toolkit (Savage Worlds):

Pulp Fiction is one of those fantasy settings that a lot of Savage Worlds players use, and occasionally use two settings, harking back to the days when pen and paper roleplaying was fairly common. Fantasy Grounds has recently updated Pulp Gear and it adds a lot of gear for literally everything you need in the Pulp career. As you probably know, you can have two Gaming Groups, which you can switch to at any time. This toolkit is my example of using the 'Pulp Gear' Gaming Group. There's a lot of great stuff here, which made me realise how easy it would be to set up and run these games. Pulp Gear Fitting Room: This is where both characters can rest and drink before going into the action. Police Report: There are basic rules on how to make a report. Briefcase: Stuff you carry vital information in, like bank details and anything else you would not want to see falling out of a car or being seen in public. Money: If you're on the good side, there's a bank where you can deposit money, if you're on the bad side, there's a drop box to get money off of. Pocket Unitager: Like a computer and things smart (for the criminal side), this is usually taken away and given to the cops. Pitchfork: What the police know as a metal baton. Cargo: Carrying lots of stolen stuff out of the area. It can be stolen goods, or maybe a bomb. Weapons: You'll have a set of weapons: a vial of green stuff, a big machete (one on the bloodied side as the cops will come), your property of choice, and preferably something that you'll show off to the cops to show that you're not really in it for the money. Accord: This is your armour piece. You don't need the muscle, so you can be a bit more of an outsider, but it's handy if you encounter aliens who don't accept equipment. The Inside Line: Corrupt cops. They can help you out with a share of the loot from your actions, or even pressure-coat something to make it easier to unload if you're on the bad side of the law.
