1. 1. In the Tool panel, click the down arrow next to the word Layers. Choose New Layer via the menu that appears. Note: Layers are the basis for most editing functions performed on an image. In digital photography, you should be aware that layers are the best way to organize what is actually in a single image. It may not seem like it, but a photo is really a collection of light source, reflected, refracted, and masked information. You get rid of shadows, light, and specular reflections by using the tools in the image-editing program. 2. 2. Click the New Layer icon. A new, blank layer appears in the Layers panel as a new layer below the current layer. Tip: The Layer menu can be hidden to prevent the name of a layer or layer group from being visible. To hide the Layer menu, right-click (Windows) or Ctrl+click (Mac OS) the name of a layer or layer group, and then choose Hide from the menu that appears. The Hide menu is found on the right side of the Layer menu when it is visible. (Note that the Layer menu is visible when a layer is selected, as shown in the next exercise.)
