Among the most significant features of HyperMotion Technology are realistic player weight transfer, acceleration and deceleration forces that occur during collisions, and free-flowing dribbling and passing animations. The Ultra Engine also delivers enhanced artificial intelligence and responsiveness, and a new Skill Transfer System that intelligently assigns player attributes to reflect each player's true ability.

1. More realistic facial expressions from more human players Each player's unique facial expression displays the pain, fear or happiness a player feels at any given moment. Players speak more clearly, use more emotional language and perform the exact action they want to do, with larger variations when more powerful actions are required.
2. More varied ball movement Players exhibit more complex dribbling and passing animations, intelligently anticipating the ball's next movement and deciding whether to kick or pass based on their teammates' and opponents' behavior.
3. Better on-ball behavior Every player responds to the ball in a meaningful and realistic way based on their action, speed, power and other factors. They move faster on the ball when they're stronger and can defend, and slow down when they have to recover.
4. Improved dribbling and ball control Players react more quickly in the moment when they need to move the ball, whether by dribbling or receiving a pass. Playing in tighter spaces results in less frequent and stronger touches, while dribbling out of tighter spaces enables players to execute more creative and powerful moves.
5. Enhanced animations and controls Better control of players results in smoother animation, enhanced responsiveness and new controls to enable smarter decisions in difficult situations.
6. Natural locomotion All players exhibit the unique way they move in the world based on their player class and size and exhibit more detailed landings after losing their balance.
7. More realistic player movement Player movements exhibit more realistic acceleration and deceleration on balls and collisions. Players make better decisions about their run to the ball, as well as when to dive, pass or shoot. Players move better in tight spaces and are able to make controlled turn-ins and backwards movements.
8. Realistic defender positioning Defenders adjust to each situation, anticipating the way to beat the opponent. They move faster and slower, have a more varied range of movement, and are more aware of the ball.
9. Better player and ball feedback Players receive feedback like all
