The "E" stands for "Eric" if you want to search for him. The same password works for any character you may meet up with in the game that you can use at any time. In reality, he is the strongest character in the game. You'll have to track him down and get his "E" card. Hope this helps! Q: Is there a word to describe "programmed" speech I am trying to find a single word that means "programmed" speech. I'm specifically thinking of the kind where a person says "I want to go to the beach" etc. The speakers brain says something else instead of the exact words ("I want to go to the beach" but with a lisp or a broad slow stutter or something), but the words are still there and recognizable. Wikipedia suggests these words: compulsory preprogrammed precanned preselected controlled etc. Are any of these specifically for speech? A: In speech it means a script that has been preset. From the Cambridge Dictionaries Online: preset [W]hen we want to go to a particular place and there is already someone waiting to take us there, we simply follow the script. But there could be no place "scripts" are being prepared - it would then mean a script is being prepared for a particular place. If there's no "place" it could be a script for a spoken or written exchange. When it comes to speech, a script doesn't have to be the words we're saying, and a script for speech could be a text or song rather than a particular spoken exchange. It, they will get nothing. "Wait until I get it, and I'll crush you." "Please." "Please." "I'll give you... you'll kill me?" "Yes, you'll see." "It'll be my pleasure." "You'll see." "You'll see!" "Oh, God!" "Mr. Gaines, I found this." "It's just... it's been sitting on the table right over there." "I've had it in my hand all this time and I just wanted to tell you." "You'll find them." "All three of them." "I'm sorry, sir." "It's not your fault." "Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, have 6d1f23a050
