I just have a few questions about maximum x max res and y max res on my monitor. What is a good max x and y settings? I have a 4k monitor which supports higher than 4k (though the max is about 4k) my computer supports it, but I was using 4k all the time. Is there a setting or program that allows me to use 6x max resolution, 12x max resolution, etc. I want to get a laptop and I'm looking at $115-? for price on a notebook as well as 15 inch to 17 inch for price (While I'm thinking maybe 17 inch), I have no idea which is best, so I thought I would ask. Also, what is your biggest weakness with your laptop? I know for me, I have no idea what I'm doing in anything but built in apps for my laptop, so I would want a computer that's easy to use, would you agree with that? So what are some ways to reduce the risk of getting a heart attack? Okay you've probably heard about eating a healthy diet, but are there other important things you should be aware of? Ideally of course you'll eat healthy, get some physical activity in, and know the symptoms of a heart attack, but what else? (Like you mentioned, I have only had 2 heart attacks in my life. The first was when I was 10, and the next was when I was 7) Anyways, we don't really go over this here, but I don't think it's right to just tell people that they are doomed and have no chance of surviving a heart attack, especially when you yourself do. I am losing a little weight as I eat healthier, I work out more, and I eat better. I like the tips that you have written that I can start. I will be sure to provide feedback. On the basis that your BP is stable and not an issue, and you are not taking a hypertensive drug (The article did mention that by chance, which is one of the reasons I think I am having issues) So what medication might be causing my current symptoms? I find myself having more fatigue, in general. Also I've been feeling more depressed, which is a little unusual. I'm currently taking a low dose of Fluoxetine, which a lot of people recommend. The usual training intervals (I'll want to break them down a little) I think should be all sets at a decent weight, c6a93da74d
