An Iranian-made fighter jet is seen before the opening ceremony of the International Army Games in Kermanshah, Iran, on Nov. 9, 2019. The Islamic Republic has been increasing its military assistance to Afghanistan, sending more troops and equipment to the war-torn country and sending advanced missiles to the terror group of the Islamic State, known as ISIS or ISIL. The Islamic Republic of Iran's aircraft carrier, the Farsi, made its maiden voyage on Sunday, the first time the surface vessel has sailed in public waters since its launch in July. Iranian Defense Minister Amir Hatami announced the carrier's launch during a ceremony on the vessel. "The Farsi is ready for conducting various new missions of navy and air," Hatami said at the launch event, according to the Tasnim News Agency. The Navy also exhibited a drone that can be fitted with different types of weapons. The Farsi is a full-sized surface warship, featuring a flight deck, radar and weapons similar to aircraft carriers. Iran is considering sending several of the new medium-sized vessels that feature all the same equipment as the Farsi, some of the country's navy officials told VOA earlier this year. The Farsi and the new vessels are part of the Islamic Republic's military modernization program, which began with the launching of the country's first domestically-built ship, the Sahand, in 1988. Iranian Navy ships and bases in the Persian Gulf are also a centerpiece of Tehran's campaign in the region against both pro-U.S. and pro-Israeli military powers, which are accused of trying to sabotage Tehran's nuclear program. The U.S. and Iran have since 1992 pursued a mutual defense accord that would ensure that Iran's nuclear program does not pose a threat to the West and provides the Islamic Republic with an ability to deter potential threats. Despite the negotiations, the Islamic Republic has been maintaining its missile program, including the Shahab-3, a short-to-medium range surface-to-air missile. In March, President Hassan Rouhani said the Shahab-3 missile, which features a 10-meters warhead and an all-weather operational capability, is ready for mass production. "If there was no respect for the [negotiating] process, it would have been easy to stop the [negotiations] process. But instead, it was Iran that is facing sanctions and it was Iran that is expanding its missile programs," said Mike Dempsey, senior director of research at the Washington-based Heritage Foundation. "Now we're at the very stage where it's not just that the Iranians are a space far away from being able to meet our demands. They are now developing capacity, particularly in what I think would be the major military challenge for us, for the [State Department's] re-certification of their nuclear program," Dempsey added. John Hughes, a senior fellow with the conservative think-tank American Enterprise Institute, said the Islamic Republic is seeing the U.S. as a threat in the region.

Ive not even dived into GIMP but was originally gonna give Photoshop a go till I bought this set. I like GIMP so once I have learned Photoshop, Ill have a well rounded package, even if its only Photoshop and the odd GIMP. I then intend to buy a copy of Paint Shop Pro, even though I think I have a license for that. I need a good image editing package, even if its only for photoshop. I will be learning Photoshop afterwards so I will not have to learn another program like GIMP first.
