The ReCycle Loop Editor/Recorder is an intuitive tool for all levels of the looping process. It allows you to both record a loop and / or edit it. Use the Loop Recorder for tracking your own samples. Or edit recorded loops with both the Loop Editor and the Loop Recorder at the same time. Edit your samples with the intuitive interface or download free samples from the world of samples, loops, music, and video from the professional online sample store. This version of the ReCycle software comes in the pro version. How do you add LoopRunner to your personal track list on ReCycle? In Version 2.0.1, add the file extensions .rcy, .rex, and .rx2 to your search list in the dropdown box of the utility. Double-click the search list entry. Drag and drop the LoopRunner project file onto your ReCycle project list. Click Import and wait while it finishes. Your LoopRunner project is ready to edit. Simply drag loop files into the Loop Editor. You can also drag a loop into the Loop Editor from ReCycle's main project file window. Once the loop is loaded into the Loop Editor, you can rename it, slice and trim it, adjust the pitches of each slice, and other many cool tricks. You can also download sample loops from the ReCycle online sample store to use in your sample libraries. Or use tools like the Loop Translator to chop your loops down to easily understandable parts. You can use the Loop Recorder to record your own loops. Or add them to a project list in your ReCycle project list. Double-click the Loop Recorder project file and drag the original loop file into the Loop Editor.
