Learn more If your bill is low, contact your energy service provider to take advantage of the Low-Bid option. For example: if you don't pay your bill, DOER will wait until your normal pay period to bill you for that electricity service. How to avoid delays in billing: Contact your payment method to schedule an automatic payment to avoid additional charges. Note: Electricity bills will go out 7-15 days after a scheduled payment. DOER's SMART data is received by 2-15 electric service providers and is used to calculate compensation for each eligible consumer. DOER uses third-party credit bureaus and data providers to verify consumer eligibility and affordability. The two credit bureaus that DOER uses are Experian and OneTrust . DOER will charge a monthly administration fee of $50.00 if consumers have one bill up to 3 years of service with the incentive program. Consumers will be asked to pay the $50.00 administration fee at the start of the program, with a similar $50.00 administration fee billed upon entering the incentive program. The end of the incentive program period will also be an administration fee of $50.00 for the remaining balance of the billing cycle. DOER will suspend administration fee payments after the incentive program has ended if you have unmet obligations with all loads. DOER will not waive administration fees for unsuccessful applicants and consumers who have unmet obligations. Due to current policy limitations, DOER will request monthly administration fees rather than a one-time payment.
