the firmware update tool runs as a windows application. there is a windows version and a linux version. the linux version is based on the openwrt distribution. if you are using a mac, you will need to use the windows version. the update prompts the user to install the new software. when the update has finished downloading, you'll be prompted to turn off the camera, which you do. then you'll be prompted to turn the camera back on. once the camera boots, the new firmware is loaded. this means that you'll have to re-enter the security code. the update download and install process can take a long time if you have a slow internet connection, so be patient. once the download is complete, the camera will restart and the firmware will begin to install. this process can take anywhere from 2 to 10 minutes, depending on your internet connection speed. today we are introducing new actions for the xbox wireless controller. you can now enable new actions such as applying filters to your xbox one, sharing your gaming moments with your friends and family and more. we are working hard to bring new actions to different controllers in the future. we are excited to announce the next version of the actions platform for the xbox wireless controller. this release adds support for a new behavior that allows you to customize certain button actions. these actions are now available in the actions xbox accessories app. use the xbox accessories app to check out all available actions. now that i've figured out how to enter the firmware select screen i can no longer change firmware version via menu. the lock icon in the upper left hand corner also won't change. it's stuck on the firmware version i last chose. instead it now only has the option to remove lock or cancel. here's a link to a video showing the problem: > actions pad firmware 17 since version 3.00 this new firmware locks all the config options in the firewire menu. i had to revert to version 2.00 to get my controls back. the new firmware also has added 2 new menu items. one to open the menu and one to lock the menu.

Hi Jeremy, I believe that HP is in contempt of court also. And it most definitely involves what they have led consumers to believe about being able to use Non-HP Printer Ink Cartridges in HP Printers. HP is still lying about this. HP has disabled my HP Officejet 4620 Series from printing anything that has the need for black ink, due to my installing a non-hp black ink cartridge into it. That means that anything in text form does not get printed. I only get blank pages. Yet, when I ask what my ink cartridge levels are, it shows that the black ink cartridge that was full when I installed it, has now gotten much lower. But the printer refuses to print out anything that calls for the use of black ink. I feel as though HP is still lying about the use of non-hp ink cartridges in their printers. They may have put an end to using a particular Firmware but they havent put an end to their lies. To be honest, I feel that the $1.5 million settlement was like a slap on the hand WITH a nylon to them because they obviously havent learned a lesson from it. I hope something can be done so that this doesnt continue on as it currently STILL is. Leisa For the second time within the same three-day period, I was unable to get my HP 6710b to start. The first time, I downloaded the firmware fix from HP, but didn't get the HP wizard to run. The second time, I did get the HP wizard to run, but didn't get any download links. Hello Jeremy, I'm not able to download the firmware for the HP 2010. What am I doing wrong? It says it's ready to download and within seconds it just disconnects. Any help would be appreciated. Thank you! 5ec8ef588b
