windows does not begin shipping with a product key because there was no way to tell whether the pc it was placed on was genuine before it was shipped and sold. as a result, the original product key for windows 7 is 00371 oem 8992671 00524. in the initial setup of windows 7 beta, when i choose "i don't have a product key", i get an error with the message "you need to enter a microsoft account and password for the product you're activating in order to install software and get support. enter it now" and that's it. when i try to "go to the store" i get a new error message "microsoft care activation cannot be started because the service is not registered on the local computer" and it doesn't tell me what services need registering. can anyone help me out here? thanks in advance. installing windows 7 oem upgrade is the most common usage of this product key. if you have a coa but cant find the product key, you are probably installing for a coa downgrade (procedure can be read in the : [windows 7 quickstart guide] () the keys can also be used for resellers that have their own customer care facilities to sell service packs and upgrades. for instructions on how to take advantage of this in your own customer care, please see [sell windows 7 in europe] () the sql server 2012 coa consists of an internal product key and a public key. the public key is stored in a xml file and referred to when installing the software. this is used by microsofts activation software to locate the software files and copy over the required data. 5ec8ef588b
